

ESCAIDE 2023 updates

Newsletter April 2023

Call for abstracts is now open – from 5 April to 15 May

The standard call for abstracts for ESCAIDE 2023 is open until 15 May. We welcome abstracts in all areas related to infectious disease and public health. These areas include epidemiology, microbiology, virology, immunology, social sciences, science communication, the application of tools and methods to support infectious disease interventions and more. We encourage submissions that inform public health actions, introduce new ideas, and bring new understandings to the field.

ESCAIDE Funding Initiative

This initiative provides financial support for the attendance of selected abstract presenters who are early-career researchers with a maximum of 5 years of work experience or current MSc/PhD students in relevant Public Health/Infectious disease prevention and control fields. Submit an abstract to ESCAIDE 2023 and if you meet the eligibility criteria, make sure you indicate your interest for being considered for the funding. Applicants who express interest will be contacted later to provide additional information. Please note that funding is only available to presenters whose abstracts are accepted.

Visit or revisit ESCAIDE 2022 plenaries on YouTube

While we wait for the ESCAIDE 2023 plenaries, we invite you to access the ESCAIDE YouTube channel where all plenaries from last year's conference are available. The topics of the 2022 plenary sessions included the ethical boundaries of controlling pandemics, the promotion and protection of refugee health, the role of public health experts in managing infodemics, and much more.
